CHAPTER IV

CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTION

4.1 CONCLUSION

As arqued in chapter III, the significant issue raised is how important the ways in which information given is. Analysis show that appllyng the correct ways to inform material has many benefit. First, information will be easier to be received, because information that would be informed adjusted to visitor's background. Second, it will make a good situation to make process of guiding more interesting. Then, the visitors will more comfortable and satisfied because they will get information same as their needed.

Finally, all the ways can be used in the process of guiding but it will be better if the most suitable of the way explanations is applied. It has purpose to make the result of guiding process better. For the writer, the first thing to do to become a good guide is to learn all the ways to inform information. After having ability in that, the writer would have confidence in delivering information. If the writer can make the process of guiding better, it will become a big contribution to the institution.

4.2 SUGGESTIONS

4.2.1 To the institution:

1. The institution should make coordination with The Faculty of Letter to guide and give information to the students that will conduct job training.

2. There would be better if the counselor her/him self may be involved in training process in order to learn the improvement achieved by the student.

4.2.2 To Faculty of Letter

1. The Faculty should give direction about the places and activity which are possible to the writer to do job training.
2. The Faculty makes a list about job training position and describes each position to the student.

4.2.3 To students who will do the next writing:

1. During the job training, the student should do the job training with responsibility. Because this is not the way to feel the real job but the student should give a contribution to increase the institution.
2. The student should share information with the other student to make different topic in final paper.
