CHAPTER IV

CONCLUSIONS AND SUGGESTIONS

4.1 Conclusions

Transitional signals are connecting words or phrases or sentences that act like bridges between parts of the broadcasting. They are used to get the point of the conversation style in radio broadcasting; “Keep it Simple, Keep it Short, Keep it Conversational”. When used, they provide greater organization within a text and lead to greater understanding and enjoyment on the part of the listener. Although the radio announcer mixes the language between English and Bahasa but they still use transitional signals in English, not in Bahasa.

4.2 Suggestions

Not only for radio broadcasting, but also transitional signals are important to use if you want to be a good writer. The difference is, if in radio broadcasting, the transitional signals are being listened by the listener, yet in writing, they are being read by the reader. Still, the function of them is same, to link something smoothly. Either for the radio announcer or the writer, they have to add more transition signals in their writing or broadcasting so there will be more varieties in it. So, keep on practicing to use the transition signals then knowing more about their function, so you can put them on the right context.

The writer also has suggestion for the Faculty of Letters itself. The writer thinks that it might be better if the faculty can have the link of working such as company which has co-operation with the faculty itself. So, the students who want to do the job training can be easier to find the place to do so.

Also, the writer suggests for English Department to make kind of training for the students before they are doing the job training in order that they have more knowledge and they can prove to the company where they are doing the job training that the students from English Department in UNIKOM can work well.