CHAPTER I

INTRODUCTION

1.1 Background

Job training is one of the subjects in English Department of Indonesia University of Computer to apply the knowledge and ability in translating and speaking English. Based on that, the writer took the job training at Museum of The Asian African Conference, because the writer is interested to be a guide at the museum. During doing the job training, the writer was really exciting and got much knowledge which had never been gotten in the class, especially about the history of Asian African Conference.

In Museum of Asian-African Conference, we not only find the information about the building and the conference itself, but also find a reading club which is called AARC (Asian-African Reading Club). The club is the interesting one because the writer never found the reading club in other museum. As far as the writer knows, a museum only gives information and shows the artifacts or another heritage thing without providing a reading club that can be attended by public. Because of that, the writer gives the title “The Role of Asian African Reading Club (AARC) in Promoting Bandung Spirit to The Public by Discussing of Bandung Connection Book”.

1.2 Scope

AARC has a structure of organization, background, objectives, members, schedule, and activities of the club itself.

1.3 Objectives

There are many objectives in doing the job training and choosing the topic in this paper, those are:

1. To fulfill one of the subjects in English Department of Indonesia University of Computer
2. To apply the knowledge that the writer has gotten from studying in English Department of Indonesia University of Computer
3. To get experience in the work world
4. To improve the ability and knowledge in speaking English
5. To give information about AARC to the public
6. To persuade the public follow that club
7. To spread the Bandung spirit to the public

1.4 Significant to Knowledge

The purpose of the writer chose that topic for the job training report is giving information about the reading club which is held in Museum of Asian-African Conference. It is the different one than another museum, because we just can find the club in that museum.

It is informal club where the people in all of the age come and out as like as they are, without the rule which is binding.

1.5 The Framework of The Theory

Asian-African Reading Club (AARC) is using skimming and previewing method in practing the club. So the writer used reading theory: skimming and previewing the text by Wiener Bazerman in his book which entitle Reading Skill Handbook.

Skimming is rapid reading for fact, and previewing is a step to take in order to read for information come before you actually begin reading.

1.6 Research Method

The writer uses the descriptive method during writing this paper. Descriptive method is the method where the writer describes and explains the topic specifically. In this report, the writer has also attached the list picture which has relation with the topic itself.

1.7 Place and Date of Fieldwork Practice

The fieldwork practice had been placed in Museum of The Asia Africa Conference at Jl. Asia Afrika no. 65 Bandung 40111. The writer became a guide for guiding the domestic or foreign tourist. It's started from 1st July, 2011 to 26th August, 2011.
