CHAPTER IV

CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTION

The conclusion and suggestion is also included in the clarifications bellows.

4.1 Conclusion

The writer not only has to change the form of the source language into target language, but also the writer has to transfer the meaning appropriately to get a natural translation as a main goal.

To transfer the meaning in the usage of the prepositions, focused on the sentence has to be known comprehensively. In the prepositions, the focus usually is on the object. After it is known, the transferring meaning can be executed by using literal translation or communicative translation.

To get an appropriated meaning and natural translation, the structure of the prepositions in the source language should have continuity in all vocabulary. Although in some cases the preposition structure can be maintained.

4.2 Suggestion

The company is expected to make the correction of the student's job while conducting the job training. The correction can reflect the responsibility of the student while conducting the job training.

The Faculty may give a suggestion such as a list of companies that expect or accept to English Department students to conduct the job training.

The students, who will conduct the job training, should have an interest in a company intended to conduct the job training, and a permission from the campus to do the job training, and of course after doing the job training the students should have one problem to be a report that became focus of the problem when the students doing the job training.
