CHAPTER I

INTRODUCTION

1.1 Background

The application is a follow-up knowledge already gained. It is also can be regarded as a benchmark of the result we achieved through a learning process.. With the job training, we can measure the achievement of which we achieve through the work load that we do. With the job training, we can emphasize the application of the result that we can implement work practices which of course relates to the field of science that we learn in lecturers.. Accordingly, through job training, students are ready to be plunged straight into the work field.

Language is a field the author learned in my study. Thus, the impact of the author's job training is to master the system and symptoms caused by the language. Based from the data the author gets from the job training, the author saw some linguistics phenomena in syntax in the work the author does. In addition, those phenomena of syntax involve a nominal phrase that the authors often find in the work the author does. These phenomena are found from the data that the author does during the process of translation. With the number of data, will allow me to collect the research data that will the author make. As a conclusion, the author decided to take the title of the author's job training report, titled "Transformation of The relative clause into noun phrase in booklet developing organizational talent for effective understanding" with a topic that the author developed this then another linguistic phenomena can be detected its existence. This topic also can make learning grammar reference concerning noun phrase formed from changes in the relative clause.

Job training that the author did must be related to the author's department. Thus the opportunities that may arise to implement job training should be a company that provides a suitable opportunity for this field. PT. INTI is one of the state enterprises that require translation service. Translation service is needed because the number of documents which is owned by this company is still using the English language. We need to translate documents into the Indonesian recall nearly all employees of these companies communicate using English. Therefore, we choose this company because a lot of opportunities for the field we were able to perform in accordance with job training.

1.2 Objectives

This report is one of the written evidence for the author that the author has followed the job training as which ones have been set by the university. The report authors also prove sincerity in running the jib training during the allotted time. In addition, the presence of this report, proving that the authors are able to apply this result of the study authors in the course.

1.3 Method

The author uses the descriptive method to explain this report and also to collect the data sources. This method will help the author and the reader to understand the purpose of the report.

1.4 Place and Time of Job Training

Job Training undertaken by each student outside lecture hours. The author himself conducting training job details are as follows:

Date : 1 – 30 July 2010

Time : 07.00 – 12.00

Place : Human resource division & General Affair of PT INTI office