ABSTRACT

Erika Nainggolan, 44,304,966. Effect of the WTO Trade Related Investment Measures on Foreign Investment in China increased*. Program Study of International Relations, Faculty of Social and Political Sciences, University Computer Indonesia*

Lack of funds owned by developing countries, to drive economic growth, the role of foreign investment (FDI) is expected. Developing countries generally apply the capital investment requirements to foreign companies who want to invest their capital. The main purpose of these requirements is to regulate and control the flow of foreign capital in such a way that it can meet its development objectives. With the implementation of these requirements, the state capital recipients will ensure that the PMA will provide maximum benefit to their economic development. But the policies adopted by developing countries related to foreign investment often prevent the entry of foreign investors to invest their capital.

One of the WTO agreement that includes set of problems associated with investment is the WTO TRIMs. WTO TRIMs is agreement about the rules relating to investment. WTO TRIMs are intended to reduce or remove barriers to foreign investment in a country. After officially became a WTO member countries China tried to update its policies to attract foreign investors to invest mainly related to the WTO TRIMs. The Chinese government made some policies such as establishment of special economic zones, technology transfer and investment procedures are simple. This is done to increase foreign investment in his country.

*As a reference to the research problem, put forward the theories of International Relations, International Cooperation, International Organization, International Trade, WTO, Investment. The method used in this research is analytical descriptive method, that describes the problem and then analyze the existing problems through data already gathered then processed and prepared on the theories and concepts that are used. Based on the framework and systems approach is used, generate a hypothesis which states: "Implementation of the WTO Trade Related Investment Measures transfer technology policy, special economic zones, and ease in permitting increased foreign investment in China."

Keywords are : Trade Related Investment Measures of WTO, China, Foreign Investment