ABSTRACT

Limbad Notebook Centre is a company that sells varius produck of notebook. Currenly a companny still intruducing their product through convensional sales, this mean the costummer must go to the store to purchase the produck. So the possibility the product knows by the people is very small. By Looking at the fast development of sales bussines in this content online sales, the development not only centre of physical store but also through the internet.

For software development methodology used was a prototype methodology with the stage of data collection, design, and evaluation, and depicted on structured modeling language use diagram like flowmap, context diagram, data flow diagram, table relation, entity relation diagram.

Based on the test result expected from this online store website can help the company in terms promotion of product, improve product sales and provides easiness for the costumer to gets the information of the product at Limbad Notebook Centre.

Key word: website, online sales, notebook