ABSTRACT

The restaurant is kind of business having functions to provide food and drink to customers aims to restore the condition of being less well be better conditions. Along with the retsoran business , now restaurant not only serving food and beverage nice and unique , but also provide an interesting and convenient for customers .The facility also included in the system services provided restaurant .In service system that runs in a restaurant Krakatau there is a shortage. The shortages which are in it service and use of time and data less used effectively .This influential on the successful restaurant.

A method of approach who writer use in this research is a method of oriented object, the tools used in approach analysis and programming oriented object that is by using UML nation.While to the method system development writer use the model the prototype. Software used in building a system is by using netbeans, xampp, and ireport.

The result of research is the construction of management information system transactions reservations .In the computerized system, data can be processed to information more useful for all the phase that exist on servicee in a restaurant Krakatau.

Keyword: Restaurant Aplication, Service, Recervation, Payment, Prototype, UML