CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTION

5.1. CONCLUSION

There are different alienation that faced by each character in the novel. The Scarecrow character has been alienated from the object since the object is treated as subject and he is treated as object, it is called objectification. He also alienated from the act of production because he is forced to do a job by the Munchkin. Since he feels unsatisfied with his job he cannot develop himself. Thus, it makes him alienated from the species being. Besides, his social class as lower also makes him alienated from the fellow man because people underestimate and call him a fool.

Like the Scarecrow, the Tin Woodman also alienated from the act of production because he does not get a satisfaction from his job; he does his job solely to get money for living. Because of his job and his social class, he becomes alienated from the fellow man. He cannot marry the Munchkin girl because she has higher position than him. Since he alienated from the act of production and the fellow man, he is being alienated from himself. Alienation occur not only Scarecrow and the Tin Woodman but it also happens to the Lion. Although, he is a King that can be categorized as upper class, he is alienated from the fellow man because of what the people judge about him. He feels that the judgment gives a heavy burden for him. It also makes the Lion does not have a friend. As a result, he desperately tries to get courage as it has been labeled on him.

Based on the analysis, it can be concluded that the alienation is not only happened to the lower class but it also happen to the upper class. It is showed from the Lion character who is upper class can be alienated as the Scarecrow and the Tin Woodman who are lower class. To overcome their problem, they make an adventure to the Emerald City to ask to the Oz the thing that can resolve their problem; the Scarecrow asks a brain to make him smart; the Tin Woodman asks a heart to make him as people who full of love; and the Lion asks courage to make him brave.

Finally, they realize that they have already had all they want. They know it by the problems that faced and the way to resolve them. Then Scarecrow becomes governor in Emerald City and by his cleverness he can lead the place wisely. The Tin Woodman becomes governor in Yellow Land of the West and he will lead the place peacefully. And the Lion becomes a King in the forest over the hill of Hammer-Head.

5.2. SUGGESTIONS

This skripsi is expected to give information and understanding of alienation; especially alienation from himself which is the development from Karl Marx ideology of alienation that based on the economy and division of labor. The writer believes that this skripsi is not perfect but the writer hopes that it can help and gives a reference for the student of English Department who will make an analysis especially about alienation. Since the analysis is only focus on the character, the student can analyze the symbols that arise in the story. For example, the symbol of the character's name, the symbol of the yellow brick road, and the symbol of classification between good witch of the north and the south, and wicked witch of the east and the west.
