ABSTRACT

The Influence of structure of assets and Profitability To capital structure at banks Listed In Indonesia Stock Exchange

Written by Fanzi Agustian

Guided By Lita Wulantika, SE., M,Si

The capital structure is the ratio or balance the company's long-term financing indicated by the ratio of debt to total assets. The capital structure is influenced by the structure of assets and profitability. The phenomenon that occurs on Banking is an increase in a period when the capital structure of the company to obtain the increase in profitability and declining asset structure.

This study aimed to analyze the effect of using the Asset Structure and Profitability indicators S.Aktiva using indicators Return on assets of the Capital Structure through Indicators debt to asset ratio, method used in this research is descriptive verification method, the sample used in this study was 5 Banks listed on the Indonesia Stock Exchange (cross section) and 6 years of financial statement data (time series) so the amount in this study were 30 data (pool data) and analysis tool used is the classic assumption test, multiple regression, analysis correlation, coefficient of determination to test the hypothesis using t-test and test-f.

The results showed that the most dominant influence on the Capital Structure of Banking listed on Indonesia Stock Exchange is the profitability (ROA) with a contribution of 84%. Whereas together (simultaneously), the structure of assets and profitability have an influence on the capital structure (DAR) of 71.0% and the remaining 29% are influenced by other factors.

Kata Kunci : structure of assets , Profitability , and capital structure.