ABSTRACT

Information of stock price for investors is an important part before making a decision to invest, this is the case in order to avoid losses that may occur, so that the analysis of internal and external factors to the company's stock price is in need. The purpose of this study was to examine the effect of earnings per share and current ratio of stock prices simultaneously and partial.

The method used in this study is descriptive and quantitative approaches verifikatif. The population in this study is the LQ-45 mining companies in the period August 1, 2008 up to January 31, 2009 in the Indoneasian Stock Exchange of 10 mining companies. While the sample is taken as the object of study is 5 (five) mining company, using purposive sampling techniques for sampling. The analysis used was multiple regression analysis.

The development of earnings per share, current ratio and stock price in the mining company's LQ-45 appear to fluctuate. Simultaneously test results earnings per share and current ratio influence on stock prices. The partial results of the test variables affect earnings per share have significant positive relationship on stock prices, while the current ratio but no significant effect on stock prices.

Keyword : Earning Per share, Current Ratio, and Stock Price.