ABSTRAK

In this era of globalization era, Human increasingly recognize the increasingly advanced technology and sophisticated in order to make it easier to perform various activities in everyday life. Progress in the field of communications, health, education, transport, and others of his is part of the examples that people increasingly require technologies such thing in his life, from ancient times until today technology is growing by leaps and bounds, and the very once famous today is the Internet. Because the Internet can help a variety of homework, office, school, and others.

Metodo research used the first two methods of system approach, system approach In this system approaches are also tools like Flowmap, Context Diagram, Data Flow Diagrams (DFD), data dictionary, normalization, table relationships and Entity Relationship Diagram (ERD) . And the second method of system development method The method used in the conduct of this sales system development is using a prototype model. Because the author began this research by collecting the necessary requirements of the system or software to be created.

Resnlight sales information systems in today's Cloth can facilitate the process of data processing. Sales information system that has been built can deal with the problems that exist in Resnlight Cloth in terms of booking and Transactions, Implementation of a system designed to improve services to consumers and make existing information systems become more optimal analysis and testing system is implemented on Resnlight Cloth memoperasiakn can allow a user in the system.