ABSTRACT

The influence of earning per share and inflation to stock price
(Case Study on banking (BUMN)companies listed on the indonesia stock exchange period 2007-2014)

There are many factor that influenced the stock price of a company. Earning per share and inflation is the significance factor. The problem that happen on banking company is when the earning per share and inflation is growing, the stock price of company is down.

The purpose of this study was to determine how much influence the Earning Per Share to Stock Price in Banking BUMN companies listed on the Indonesia Stock Exchange on period 2007-2014.

The method used in this study is descriptive and verification analysis. The test statistic used in multiple regression. The population in this research is Banking BUMN companies listed on the Indonesia Stock Exchange on period 2007-2014 in 4 quantity company.

The technique to assemble sample is saturated sampling because it used all population to determine the sample. Based on this sampling technique it has 32 sample for fiancial report.

The results of hypothesis testing in this study indicate that (1) changes in Earning Per Share has significant influence and is positive on Stock Price in Banking BUMN companies listed on the Indonesia Stock Exchange, (2) changes have the Inflation is negative influence and not significant on Stock Price in the Banking BUMN companies listed on the Indonesia Stock Exchange.

Keywords: Earning Per Share, Inflation, Stock Price