CHAPTER III

CONCLUSIONS AND SUGGESTIONS

This chapter is concerned with the conclusions and suggestions of this research. The conclusion is written in accordance to the data analysis shown in Chapter II. The suggestion is written especially for the next further researches who are interested in conducting further research in analyzing on the topic under discussion.

3.1 Conclusion

Based on the description in chapter II, we can conclude that syntactically the negation has the different structure. “Not” is used before auxiliary verb then follow by verb/noun/adverb. Then, “no” which means not a/not any is a negation that is followed by noun. “Non” is followed by noun and the form will be Non(noun) or Non-(noun). Meanwhile, “none” means no one/no body, which is formed None + of + object (then, us, you, etc). It is not only different syntactically, negation above also different semantically. As an adverb, “not” is used before auxiliary stands for the negative of a preceding group of word. The negation “no” can stand independently. “No” as a noun also can give a negative answer for a question or a statement. “Non” as a prefix used to express of something and the last “none” can be used as an adverb or pronoun.

3.2 Suggestion

This research could be improved in the next research. There are some negation that is not analyzed yet in this research, for examples, neither, nor, and other negation. The next researcher who are going to perform a deeper research based on the same topic are hoped to improve the analysis of negation. So, it makes a clear describing of negation.
