CHAPTER V

CONSLUSIONS AND SUGGESTIONS

In this chapter will explain about the conclusions of the study. In addition, suggestions for readers will also be presented in this chapter.

5.1 Conclusions

In the novel The Things We Do for Love there is the issue about the women existence in marriages that are reflected in the main character in the novel called, Angela DeSaria Malone. The women's existence in marriage described by several factors. First, the economic factor, the women's existence can be seen through the economic factor. Women are able equate his position with the men one of them by working outside the house. Woman who works outside the home to support the financial problems without having to rely on a man, man may include a father, uncle, brother or other. However, when the woman is married, she will lose the existence, because the general idea of a married woman is she cannot work outside the home because they have to take care of the house, the husband, as well as children.

Second, social life, like social beings it becomes an integral part. Therefore, as social beings we are bound to interact with each other that we cannot live alone. In social life factor is the existence of women can be seen by following the activities of women in the community to socialize. However, it will be lost when the women were married, because for a married woman would be more time spent on doing activities at home. Third, offspring. The existence of women really be seen when a married woman can give birth. It is associated with one of the functions of the woman pregnant and gave birth to a child.

It can be concluded that the offspring become the main factor influencing the existence of women in marriage. Offspring is highly desirable in a marriage due to their offspring, a couple of men and women who marry will have a generation ahead. Besides offspring is also a complement of happiness for the couple. When the woman as the wife cannot fulfill its function as the woman then the existence as a woman will be lost.

5.2 Suggestions

This research is expected to be useful for the readers, and students who studied literature. In this study, there are still many things that can be researched more about the themes and flow for example.

Based on the above discussion and conclusions, this research is also expected to be useful for writers in the understanding of women's roles and the factors that influence in a marriage. So it can be used as a reference in living everyday life.
