CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTION

On this chapter, the present writer conclude the researche by analysing the data reprsented in chapter 4, meanwhile, the present writer also suggest some input for reader incase the reader wants to continue this discussion.This chapter is divided into parts of conclusion and parts of suggestion.

5.1. Conclusion

The conclusion is based on the analysis that being made in chapter IV; there are 9 data. From those data were found five classification of transfer predicate, described as:Transfer predicate focused on path (3 data), Transfer predicate focused on source (2 data), Transfer predicate focused on goal (2 data), Transfer predicate focused on path and goal (1 data), Transfer predicate focused on source and goal (1 data). By focusing on the research question in chapter I, the conclusions that can be made are:

A. Verb as transfer predicate shows the transition and movement of position. Additionally, the verbs that built a predicate as transfer not fixed, however it depends on the function and what is the focused of that sentence. Not only that, transfer predicate is flexible, not only based on theories found in the literature, but it can be a combination between two or more focuses.

B. Mostly, the functions that follow this predicate serve as object and adverb. The argument receiving the action from the verb has the semantic roles of affected and place.

5.2 Suggestion

On this section, the present writer suggest some input for the reader in next discussion, there are:

A. Since transfer predicate has many focuses; not restricted only on theories, it can develop and spreadinto combination between two or more focused that involved in one sentence. Therefore, in the future, the next researches can focuses on other function of semantic roles that serve in multiple focus of transfer predicate.
B. Based on the discussion, this researches can be extended to other focused of transfer predicate, involved the function of constituent and syntactic that built a sentence. This mean, the next researches must found the relation between the focused of transfer predicate, the verbs, the constituent, the argument, and how they are related.